Each year some 4000 singers, dancers and musicians from all over the world meet in Llangollen to compete in the International Musical Eisteddfod, one of the world's great music festivals.

The Llangollen Eisteddfod started in 1947, enthused by the post-war spirit of reconciliation and reconstruction. It is a unique celebration of the power of music to create peace and harmony, and in 2004 was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize. It is still run by a largely volunteer organisation.

The Friends' organisation is a separate charity. It has supported the Eisteddfod for forty years, and has in that time raised £400,000 to help the festival. Members of Friends come from all over the world. Each July during Eisteddfod week the Friends' Tent is a focus for reunions of old friends, for meetings of new friends, and for discussion and debate about the latest developments in the festival we all love. Through the Ambassadors' scheme, Friends are encouraged to promote the Eisteddfod by giving talks and writing articles for publication.
